Ten Years of Vision

Our vision is to take healthcare and spiritual care to those dying without it in northern Uganda by building a church and mission hospital in Oyam district. Ten years ago we began to publish about our calling on a simple blog. Since then we have toured Uganda, met other missionaries in country, and prepared ourselves for service. Our website still hosts that blog but now has so much more. We invite you to visit, follow along on any or all of our social media outlets and share them with others. Together we can make a difference!

Returning to Uganda

After a three-month itinerant tour and furlough in the States, Todd and Cindy Lemmon are packing their bags again, preparing to head back to Uganda in mid-July. Until it becomes home, their length of stay is limited by tourist visa rules. We hope this trip holds the key to getting things started with buying the land on which the mission structures will eventually go. One obstacle has been that Ugandan land can only be permanently purchased by Ugandans. The American option is a lease that, after 99 years, returns to the tribe it came from. Our vision is to build something that outlasts these generations. It is not about us, but about what an eternal God can do when we submit to Him. So we will form a Uganda Limited Corporation, built with TLCU team members, that can do what individual Americans cannot.

More lives saved

Just because the Lemmons have been in Florida doesn't mean their efforts haven't been fruitful in Uganda. The TLCU family has been at work serving and responding to needs as they arise. God called to our attention little Naume, who was dying of hemolytic malaria. Her mother reached out to us in time to get her treated. Now she and her mother are back home on their rice farm in Mbale. Naume is not alone. We receive and respond to needs like this continually, restoring hope and giving people an opportunity to love and serve God better.

Prayers

As always, pray for our direction, wisdom, and resource to accomplish God's will where He sends us. Pray also for:

Our sponsored students, who are the future of this mission, two of whom just obtained their diplomas but who must find a way to make do until we can employ them for mission purpose;

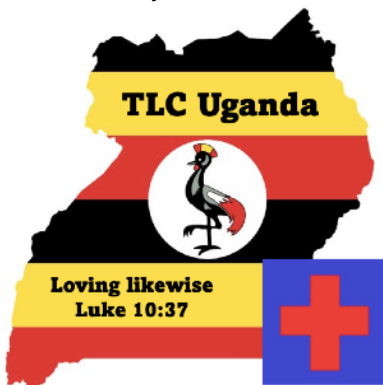

Our Luo language teacher and her husband, Beatrice and Simon, who just survived a miscarriage;

Our partners, several of whom are grieving loved ones lost or health crises in their families;

Our Ugandan neighbor, Morris, who continues to rehab from leg injuries sustained in the bus crash that killed his family and others.

Tax exempt status application meets obstacle

We submitted our 501(c)(3) application to the IRS so that we can apply for corporate sponsorship, receive grants, and process your gifts without a middle-man. Being tax exempt will mean a lot more dollars being turned into lives saved and changed. Last week we got the disappointing news that our application was declined over a technicality, and we have resubmitted it according to their guidelines. While we wait, we continue to utilize a missionary servicing agency for our support donations.

Seeking new partnerships

We launched in faith two years ago even before securing full funding. When in the USA, Todd and Cindy work hard to develop

PROGRESS	$4000 GOAL	Launching Goal	$4000
	$3500	Total Shares	80
	$3000

relationships with churches, businesses, fellowship groups, and individuals. You can help champion the cause of TLCU by encouraging your club, church, corporation, Bible study group, or family to take on a sponsorship role in the mission. If only eighty committed to $50 a month, we would be funded to launch this ministry. How many commitments can you muster while the Lemmons are overseas? How? Visit our website and find our Contribute page.

Planning for the future

Our website describes several projects we plan to bring to fruition in the next several years.

We hope to begin with the procurement of a piece of land near Minakulu. At four acres, the one pictured here is small and sculpted, but it is strategically located where the main highway intersects a road that connects dozens of underprivileged villages. Pray that God either makes this land purchase possible or shows us where else He would have us build. God's will be done!
